

Marilyn Kirkpatrick knows what it takes.

We need to change if we are going to attract good jobs.

The old ways of doing things just aren't good enough.

For years here in Nevada we depended on big gaming and big construction, but we have never been successful at attracting new, clean industry, high tech jobs, or emerging companies.

We rate as one of the best states in the country for low business taxes, business-friendly regulation, and ample land and available buildings. But that was never enough then. It isn't enough today.

New businesses want something more.

Marilyn Kirkpatrick works directly with business leaders interested in investing in Nevada. They are looking for the right place to bring new jobs and new opportunities.

But our low taxes, light regulation, and uncrowded spaces aren't enough. They tell Marilyn and other Nevada leaders that they are concerned about our commitment to a quality education system and truly safe communities.

Better schools and safer communities attract jobs.

We don't want Nevada to lose out in the race to attract good paying jobs in clean, growing industries. Marilyn Kirkpatrick knows we have to improve our schools, make our neighborhoods safe, and get real accountability before we can reach our potential and broaden our economic base.

And Marilyn Kirkpatrick will fight to make that happen.
